INTRODUCTION

The purpose of the Building Futures: Head Start Impact Study is to determine how children learn, grow and prepare for school. This study involves approximately 5000 children across the country who are participating in Head Start, preschool, daycare, or other child care programs. The Building Futures: Head Start Impact Study will examine how Head Start helps children to improve their readiness for school and their early school performance, compared to children enrolled in other preschool and child care settings. The study will also look at the educational and comprehensive services components that work best for children. Your completed survey will help us to understand more about Head Start and other preschool and child care programs and how they work with parents and children.

This study is sponsored by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS). Your participation is very important to the study and your responses will be confidential. Our interview will take approximately 1 hour.

Before we begin, let me read the following to you:
